PRINCETONIANS IN CHICAGO

Toastmaster Don McNeill is pictured above with two of a group of 29 Princeton citizens who travelled to Chicago to visit the International Live Stock Show and the Breakfast Club. Right is Dr. Bert L. Keeney, a dentist-farmer of "Toothacres" farm and owner of Noah's Back-a-Duck, son of famous 33rd. Glen E. Farmer, (center) the only man in the party who is not a farmer, but the town's dry cleaner. Both of the men were interviewed on the show.

Snake Braves December Weather At Fredonia

Mrs. Florence Parr reports she thought her eyes were playing tricks on her last Friday afternoon when she looked out of a window of her Fredonia home and saw a black racer crawling across the lawn. She said she immediately got her weapon, "the hoe" and killed it. The snake measured about six feet and was heading for the basement of the house seeking shelter from winter. Although the weather was warm that day, it is said to be unusual to see a reptile out of hibernation on December 6.

Sub-Station Employs Expert In Department Of Animal Husbandry

Ralph J. Overfield, expert in animal husbandry, has been employed at the Western Kentucky Sub-Experiment Station here, as assistant in the department of animal husbandry, according to an announcement made by S. J. Lowry, superintendent of the local institution.

Mr. Overfield was graduated from the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture in 1941 and received a master's degree in 1942 in animal husbandry from the University of Wisconsin College of Agriculture, Mr. Lowry said.

After three years of Army service, Mr. Overfield served as assistant county agent in McCracken and Marion counties.

"Contemplated enlargement of livestock work at the Western Kentucky Experiment Sub-Station necessitates the services of a man well trained in animal husbandry, and we consider ourselves fortunate in obtaining the services of such a well prepared young man," Mr. Lowry said.

Three new projects in animal husbandry which are being initiated at the substation, include research in beef, pork and lamb production, Mr. Lowry stated.

Ruth Ladd Wins Rotary Sponsored Essay Contest

Wanda Phelps Takes Second Prize With The Third Prize Going To Mary Louise Askew

Ruth Ladd, 14 year old Butler High School freshman, was acclaimed winner of an essay contest on "What My Community Needs", sponsored by the Princeton Rotary Club in conjunction with the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, Mark Cunningham, committee chairman, announced here this week.

As winner of the Caldwell county contest Ruth received a $50 defense bond from the Farmers and First National Banks of Princeton, and is eligible to compete in the regional contest to be adjudged later, Mr. Cunningham said.

Judges, Mrs. J. J. Rosenthal, Guy Nichols, and Eugene Williamson ascribed to Miss Ladd's essay, soundness of thought, originality, precision of form, and correct and effective grammatical construction, to award her the first prize, Mr. Cunningham said.

Ruth, who maintains an exceptional scholastic record, appears regularly on the special honor roll at Butler, according to C. A. Horn, principal. In addition to her academic studies Ruth plays in the beginning band under the supervision of K. V. Bryant.

Ruth is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. B. Ladd of Princeton Route 3.

Two others, of the 64 contestants, received prizes. Second prize of a $25 defense bond was granted by the McConnell Electric Company to Wanda Phelps, 15 year old Fredonia High School junior. Third prize in the contest was awarded to Mary Louise Askew by the Steger Lumber Company of Princeton, according to Mr. Cunningham.

The three essays which were adjudged best in Caldwell county will be forwarded to the state chamber for consideration in the regional contest. From the winners in the four regional contests will come the state winners. All judging will be complete and state winners announced by February 20, 1952, it was said.

The prize winning essay by Ruth Ladd will be published on the editorial page of next week's Leader.

Billy Martin Wins Annual FFA Contest

Butler Senior Receives $25 Savings Bond Plus Free Trip To Louisville

Billy Martin, Butler High School senior, is $25 richer for having learned to put into practice "the things that are taught in vocational agriculture classes."

Successful application of those things learned in class brought Billy the Western Kentucky District championship in the fifth annual Kentucky Future Farmers of America Contest, Jimmy Maddox, vocational agriculture instructor of Butler High School, announced Monday.

In addition to a $25 savings bond, Billy will receive an expense paid trip to the Annual Awards Night Luncheon to be held in Louisville later, Mr. Maddox said.

Billy has earned $2,000 in completing eleven projects which include three in tobacco, two in hogs, two in beef, and one in corn.

Martin plans to go into agriculture as a vocation, either continuing his studies in vocational agriculture in college or putting them into practice on his own farm, Mr. Maddox said.

Billy has been enrolled in vocational agriculture since 1948, and has been an active member of the Butler Chapter of the Future Farmers of America for the past three years. He now holds the position of treasurer of the Western Kentucky District Federation of the F. F. A.

Jailed Man Makes Suicide Attempts

Gene Sedberry Admitted To Narcotic Hospital After Slashing Himself

In a second attempt at suicide within the last week, Gene Sedberry, 23-year-old marijuana addict, was found unconscious with his wrists and ankles badly slashed, here at about 12 p. m. Tuesday, Sheriff Glover Lewis reports. Sedberry, confined in the Caldwell county jail on charges of drunken driving since November 22, was discovered to be in critical condition by jail attendants, Tuesday night, and was removed to Caldwell County War Memorial Hospital where he received treatment and was placed under observation, county authorities state.

Sedberry made the first attempt on his life Saturday night, December 1, when he attempted to sever the veins in his wrists with razor blades. At this time, he was discovered by authorities and received treatment before any serious injury occurred, according to county officials. Jail attendants, who state that all dangerous objects were removed from Sedberry's cell following the first suicide attempt, are puzzled as to the source of the razor blades used Tuesday.

In a conversation with a local minister, Sedberry revealed that he became addicted to marijuana while working in California with individuals who regularly used the narcotic. His present condition, authorities state, is largely dependent upon "tragic and disruptive life which he led as a child."

During a special hearing in the office of the county judge, Sedberry, veteran of World War II, was declared a narcotics addict, and was escorted to the United States Public Health hospital for addicts at Lexington, by Sheriff Glover Lewis.

No marijuana was located on Sedberry's person at the time of his arrest, according to officers. Claudine Baker, county attorney, states that although the source of the marijuana is not yet determined, Sedberry must have acquired it in this vicinity. A detailed report will be made to the National Narcotics Board, and a thorough investigation of the case is expected, Mr. Baker said.

Something To Think About

American soldiers in Korea won't tidy up their fox-holes late Monday afternoon, December 24, and go home to spend Christmas with their families, to return refreshed to their duties after the holiday.

No, warfare isn't like that. It's not a 9 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. job—it's an around-the-clock, three-shift, day-in and day-out affair, with no time off, and three meals a day only if the enemy feels inclined to let up on his artillery and small arms fire long enough for him to open that can of cold C-rations.

Since Defense Bond-buying is one of the chief ways we at home can back up the men in the front lines, there should be no time limits on a campaign to sell Bonds. There is no earthly reason why Defense Bond-purchasing be confined to an "8-hour day."

All of us should buy Defense Bonds on the same rigorous schedule that Americans fight and die defending against Communist aggression.

Surely the privilege and duty to buy Defense Bonds are not confined to any particular period. Saving through Defense Bond purchases should be an every pay-day objective for all of us. For Defense Bonds not only assure our fighting men that you're supporting them, but they also provide you and your family with financial independence and security.

Don't forget—DEFENSE IS YOUR JOB, TOO! And it's a full-time, continuing job. Buy Bonds on the Payroll Savings Plan. Start now. If you are already enrolled, try to increase your regular allotment.

Kentucky Is Moving

Yes, Kentucky is moving and in the right direction. Wars and rumors of wars have, to a great extent, pushed the news of our progress off the front pages of our papers, but it is a fact that the year 1951 has brought extraordinary progress to our state. Really, if you have travelled around the state to any extent you wouldn't have to read about the improvements being made as there are visible signs of them on every hand. You wouldn't have to be told that agriculture in the state had gone ahead by leaps and bounds, for the well-kept farms along the highways would tell you the story. Other progress is indicated by the large amount of construction work that is going on in almost every section of the state.

A portion of this progress is, of course, just a part of the general increase in business for the country as a whole; but, according to the statistics, the increase in Kentucky has been considerably ahead of the increase for the southern states as a whole and is even above the national average. For this we can, in part, thank the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board. This board was created as an independent agency of the State government under authority given by the General Assembly in 1948. The nine members of this organization serve without compensation, but we could well have paid them for their services for they have done an outstanding job.

In its short life of three years it has compiled and distributed practical information of the resources of our state and has directly influenced a number of industrial plants to locate here to say nothing of the long range benefits that will have a bearing on our future development. Until this agency was set up, there was no place in the state for anyone to go to get exact information that is needed by industry before they can decide to locate a plant. This board has made surveys all over the state and now any organization that is contemplating opening up a new plant can obtain all the information they need. They can get maps, details of mineral and water resources, information as to available utilities, transportation, labor supply and any other pertinent information they may be seeking.

In the decade ending in 1950 Kentucky showed a loss in population which resulted in the loss of a Congressional district. This was, of course, directly due to the fact that we did not have enough business to employ all of our young people as they finished school and it was necessary for them to go elsewhere to earn a living. If the year 1951 is a true picture of our future development, we can rest assured that when the census is compiled in the year 1960, we will be able to show a healthy increase in population. All we need do is for all of us to make the development of our state our business.

The Cotton Bowl

The Kentucky football team faces the Cotton Bowl in Dallas with a record of 7 wins and 4 losses. It is not a record that usually inspires bowl bids, but the bid was received before the last game with Tennessee. Despite its record the Kentucky team will probably give a good account of itself in the Cotton Bowl against Texas Christian University.

There is something to be said for the statement that was released by the authorities that make the selection for the Cotton Bowl to the effect that it does not take a team with a perfect record of wins to play at Dallas. In other words the emphasis is not on an all winning team. It could be said that had the Cotton Bowl Committee waited until after the Tennessee game, they would never have selected Kentucky to play at Dallas. But it must be remembered that before the Tennessee game, and at the time it received its bid to go to Dallas, Kentucky had lost three games. It is unusual for a team that has lost three games to receive a bid to one of the major bowls.

Whether or not it is a sign that the bowls are de-emphasizing their games, Kentucky with a rather mediocre season behind it is in the Cotton Bowl. It would have created considerably more enthusiasm among Kentucky followers of the "Wildcats" had they held Tennessee to a closer score, but just the same there will be lots of rooters in the Cotton Bowl stands from Kentucky come New Year's Day. Kentucky is recognized as having a colorful team, win or lose, and there should be a full house to see them play in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day.

Politics In The Offing

Little is being said about it now, but wait until January and the political fur is very apt to fly. This State must be redistricted and some Democratic Congressman will be out of a job. Every one of them will be at Frankfort or represented there engaged in a battle for his Congressional seat. It will be every dog for himself.

The biggest political wrangle in many-a-day is sure to transpire. The new districts should be set up according to population but they are certain to be set up according to politics as well.

Little Chips

By J. S. H.

Heard a feller say t'other day that the reason our government costs too much is that we have too much government, and what this country really needs today is a five-cent administration. The old philosopher also mused that our seat of government, these days, is being sat upon a great deal.

So you don't like newspapers. You think they should be restricted—just a TENEY LITTLE BIT. Probably the reason is because you've stood on the street corner and listened to some political thunderburst cussin' newspapers, with no thought whatever except to get votes for himself or some buddy of his. Unless, of course, he is thinking of all the things he might get by with if there were no newspapers. Before you join in with these, would-be-destroyers of press freedom, please keep one thing in mind—just ONE THING: If and when newspapers lose their freedom, YOU will lose yours. Don't take anybody's word for that. Think it through for yourself.

Hairdressers predict that women who are young in heart will wear hair pieces again, come the New Year. They'll come in handy too, I'm sure, for the bald of plate.

Kentucky Folklore

"Good Manner Again"

By Gordon Wilson, Ph. D.
(Western State College)

Every once in a while I get out of my files a mimeographed sheet of rules as laid down by an academy in North Carolina in 1848. The rules carry with them the number of lashes to be given for infraction, as meticulously as any lawbook could have prescribed punishments. Though ten lashes constituted the highest number in those days, there are exactly thirty-six misdemeanors punishable by whipping, with the lashes beginning at two. I suppose that a single lash might miss its mark or hit a thick place on a fellow's trousers; a second one, and usually more, could find out the less protected places and bite into the skin and flesh.

The one rule that tickles me most, one I have mentioned before in this column, is "For climbing every foot above three feet up a tree—a lash." I suppose that a boy might have to climb at least three feet occasionally to shake down a ball or to rescue his cap if some bad big boy had put it beyond his reach. Many of the rules seem pretty sensible, even though the penalties are wholly in terms of the switch: quarreling, fighting, blackguarding, calling each other liars, gambling, telling lies. The rules that intrigue me most have to do with what we might call good manners rather than actual criminal acts.

Though manners were evidently rather formal, or were planned to be, it seems pretty good when children are reminded to observe them. If you did not say "Yes, sir" and "No, sir," you got two lashes. If you did not make a bow "when coming in and going out," you got two more. The penalty was doubled when you failed to make a bow as you left for home, for you got four lashes then, the same as for calling another a liar. Coming to school with dirty face and hands also brought down two lashes. Fighting each other "in time of books" (I quote) brought two lashes. Misbehaving to other persons on the road to and from school brought four lashes, a punishment that was raised to six when a stranger was in the house (schoolhouse, I suppose). And on and on the rules go, holding out only a punishment for infringement but no mentioned reward for obedience.

Somehow, because of wars and unsettled conditions generally, manners, like the old gray mare, "ain't what they used to be." Certainly manners are much less stiff and, in most cases, seem quite genuine. But in many instances, there just does not seem to be any notion as to why there should be any at all. We brats of an earlier age were sometimes pretty offensive when our practiced manners, but, at least, we had them. If less-mannered ones would have liked to take us out and roll us in the mud because we were used as models by the parents of the neighborhood, at least we managed to escape most of the punishment. And when some child ran amuck of society and broke all the customs, his parents or the country-school teacher taught him some manners with the same sort of lashes, counted out or not, that the youngsters of North Carolina must have felt pretty often over a hundred years ago.

I never tire of telling of the little girl who would not say "Yes ma'am" to the teacher and who was switched until she said it, loudly enough to be heard a quarter of a mile away if the wind had been right. I am pretty sure that that same little girl, who is now the mother of thirteen children, has seen to it that all the baker's dozen of her family have avoided the error that humiliated her so much more than a half century ago.

One of my colleagues of many years ago suggested that college students should have a course in plain manners, and I think he was right, even then. He died before the days of crowded buses when elderly women stand while young fellows sit, with or without their eyes open. Maybe a few twinges of conscience and memories of Mother make a fellow close his eyes rather than see a woman standing while the bus lurches across rough places in the road. It is good to know that some young men and many older ones still believe that a woman should be given first consideration. It might do some of us good to read such manners books as were once popular or even lists of punishments such as the one I have mentioned. There should be no age limit, it seems to me, on manners.

OBERLIN'S Observations

DICK OBERLIN
WHAS
NEWS DIRECTOR

A whole lot of people are becoming more than somewhat irritated by the super selling pressure many of our larger emporiums are exerting to bolster Christmas business.

It does seem a very strange thing that merchants find it necessary during this time of inflation, high employment, high prices and some restrictions on the goods available to get their Christmas display windows glowing two weeks before Thanksgiving.

As one young friend of mine put it, "They are taking all the joy and real spirit of Christmas out of the holiday. Of all our holidays, Christmas should be least commercialized. But it's most."

As a matter of fact, it was the merchants of the nation who persuaded the Administration during President Roosevelt's term of office to move our traditional Thanksgiving Day back a week.

The purpose of this was obviously to provide an additional week for Christmas shopping between the two big holidays which come only a month apart late in the year.

The whole idea of this religious observance—and too often we forget it is a religious observance—is a spirit of love and giving. That makes it doubly difficult to forgive retailers greed.

Nobody has any objection to firm reminders to do your Christmas shopping early. Actually, it is not only wiser and often a lot more economical to get the Christmas shopping, or at least most of it, out of the way in September and October, it also makes it possible for you to really enjoy the holiday a lot more.

But decorating windows with enticing Christmas merchandise in mid-November, even before Thanksgiving, is abusing the privilege.

This is intended primarily as a kindly word of warning to our friends in the retail merchandise business. They may arouse the public to such a fury that an organization which might be called "The Real Spirits of Christmas" would come into being.

The R. S. C. would, of course, spend the money we now spend on family and friends, every penny of it, to help the poor, the crippled, the needy. This would come a whole lot closer to the real spirit of Christmas than the sort of observance we give it today—which is more like a Roman festival.

Do You Know?

Sulphur is mined from deep "domes" by a process which uses three pipes, one inside the other. Water is pumped down the outside pipe and compressed air down the inside pipe and the melted sulphur is forced up the middle pipe.

To travel the Alaska Highway, a motorist is required to have a driver's license, six good tires, at least $100 in cash and an accident policy.

The Right Toys Mean Family Fun

Toys or games which can be shared by the whole family should be important parts of every Christmas check list.

So says Emma Dickson Sheehy, associate professor of childhood education at Columbia University, who holds that parents can get to know their children better by sharing their play experiences. She explains:

"Parents must realize that play is the most important activity of childhood, and one of the means whereby the child's mind, body and personality are developed. Therefore, the deeper the parent's insight into his child's play patterns, the more he will discover about that child's whole makeup."

Following Professor Sheehy's recommendations, the Toy Guidance Council has urged its 1,200 member retail toy stores throughout the country to feature toys this season which will permit parents to share play with the youngsters.

More than 50 types of toys are listed which fall into this category, covering such varying interests as music, sports, intellectual and other activities of educational, vocational or dramatic nature.

Parlor games, designed for participation by the whole family are recommended by Mel Freud, president of the Council. These include table football, baseball games, indoor bowling, billiards, puzzles and challenging new board games. Freud adds:

"Construction sets and toys that can be worked by parent in cooperation with child are particularly beneficial. Sports equipment also is recommended, such as table tennis, boxing gloves, basketball, balls and baseball paraphernalia. If the parent is adept at making he can encourage the child to learn to play some of the toy's instruments now on the market. Among these are drum sets, electric organs, plastic harmonicas and bagpipes."

When a U. S. government check for seven and a half million dollars was issued in 1949 to balance treasury books, it was believed to be the largest ever issued.

Safety Check For Newly Built Pond

By Oliver C. Allcock
(Soil Conservation Service)

If you have just checked the safety of your newly constructed pond, you are well ahead of the old saying, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." It will apply in taking care of a pond.

With a watershed of five acres, the top of the fill to a pond should be two feet higher than the bottom of the spillway, according to the Soil Conservation Service standards.

A simple rule for determining width of the spillway for ponds with small watersheds is to make the spillway one-half wide for each acre draining it. Add four feet to this figure to get the desired width of way.

Some new ponds in the county have already washed out this fall because the safety features were up to standard.

VERTS IDLE LAND
D. G. Brown, Conservation Officer, Kentucky Division of Game and Fish, reports that the Division has furnished fish for over twenty-five ponds in Caldwell county this year.

When should a new pond be stocked with fish?

After a pond is full of water and it has been determined that it will maintain a satisfactory water level, it is ready for fish.

Mr. Brown is in charge of ordering fish for Caldwell county. Requests for fish may also be left at the soil conservation district

FARM NEWS

Ky. Farm News

Bullitt county farmers who inoculated soybean seed at planting had yields of 2 to 4 more bushels per acre.

The fourth milk route in Laurel county is being established by the Carnation Company.

Montgomery county homemakers completed 15 wool suits, six wool coats, 1 camel's hair coat and seven rayon suits in a tailoring class.

The cow-and-calf plan in Todd county is expanding rapidly, more than 500 beef cows having been brought into the county this fall.

In Christian county, 371 homemakers attended the first of a series of lessons given in 24 homemakers clubs on refinishing furniture.

Nicholas county homemakers made 212 lampshades with an estimated saving of $456.

In Marion county, 378 articles of leather were made in a homemakers club craft project.

Hickman county farmers had headquarters. They will be forwarded to Mr. Brown.

GOOD COVER CROP
While passing the farm of Forest and Robert Cayce, of the Eddy Creek community, this week, I saw ten head of cattle grazing in a field of excellent cover crop. It consisted of a dense growth of balboa rye.

Not only was the cover crop protecting the land, but it was furnishing excellent pasture which satisfied the cattle.

Thomas, son of Forest Cayce, stated that there was also another field with a good cover crop on his father's farm.

County Agent's Column

By R. A. Mabry

For sheep growers the busy season, lambing time, is on and there is always danger of pregnancy disease as lambing time approaches.

Feeding is the most important item in control of the disease. The ewe should have sufficient feed not only to be in good condition but to gain in weight during pregnancy. Ewes in good breeding condition should gain 20 to 30 pounds during gestation. Thin ewes should gain 30 to 40 pounds or more. About half the increase in weight should occur during the last third of pregnancy.

For prevention of pregnancy disease, it is important to have the ewes continue gaining in weight until the lambs are dropped. The grain requirement for one ewe will vary from 1/2 to one pound or more daily during the last month of pregnancy. The amount of grain to feed depends upon the quality of hay and pasture and the condition of the ewe. It is desirable that at least half of the grain mixture be yellow corn. Protein and mineral supplements are desirable when non-legume hay is used. A good winter pasture is very helpful in preventing pregnancy disease. The ewes should have access to plenty of clean water and common salt at all times.

Pregnancy disease may be successfully treated in some ewes during the early stages of the disease. The ewe may be given two ounces of molasses or brown sugar daily. In addition, a grain 775 samples of soil tested in ten months time.

Sheep numbers in Scott county are said to be on the increase, and many farmers report incomes of $40 per ewe.

Trigg county homemakers held an International Festival attended by 250 men, women and children.

The Robert Conover heirs in Adair county cut 46,000 board feet of lumber from a 15-acre tract that cut 86,000 feet five years ago.

With the recent purchase of two purebred bulls, all bulls in Elliott county now are registered or purebred.

Sixty-five members of the Glasgow Rotary Club had an old-fashioned dinner with Etelle 4-H Club of Barren county.

ration of 1 1/4 to two pounds daily should be given. Corn alone may be used. If a mixed ration is used it should contain 3/4 corn by weight. The ewe should have access to hay, water, and salt. It is best to leave the sick ewes with other sheep as their eating may induce the sick ones to take feed. If the sick ewes can be nursed along until the lambs are dropped most of them will recover.

HORSES' EXPENSES SPIRAL

Hallandale, Fla. — (AP) — The high cost of living has reached horses and horsemen, too. A check on feed bills finds the current charge for a sack of oats is $6.50. Five years ago the same sack cost $5.25. Ten years ago it brought $4. Hay now brings $80 a ton compared to $85 in 1946 and $40 in 1941. Straw, which is merely bedding for the horses, is priced at $70. Ten years ago it cost only $20.

Racing officials estimate that by winning one race during the season a horse should just about break even for his keep.

The United States and Canada between them use 700,000 tons of sulphur a year to help make pulp paper.

It is estimated that each automobile contains about 30 pounds of sulphur.

Banker Finds Success By Joining A Church

Miami, Fla. — (AP) — William Mark Brown, who founded 52 corporations and several banks, says his first rule of success is to belong to a church.

But that doesn't mean the 89-year old capitalist expected the Almighty to do his working or thinking for him. He says he attended the Episcopal Church in his home town of Springfield, Mass., "because my folks did. But making friends with the rector was my own idea."

That friendship paid off when the rector, transferred to Utica, N. Y., heard of an opening in a real estate and insurance firm and got the job for Brown.

That started Brown on his way to wealth. He left for Utica without capital or influence. In ten years, he had learned enough about real estate, insurance, rail-roading and banking to start several corporations and four banks. The 52 corporations he founded were mostly enterprises which helped the newly-founded city of Miami.

His second, third and fourth success rules are closely related to the first:

2. Be an opportunist. (He asked

Five Die In 1950 In County From TB

By Dr. W. L. Cash
(County Health Director)

Last year 1,073 Kentuckians died of tuberculosis. Of these, five were from Caldwell county, according to Dr. W. L. Cash, Health Officer.

"Because Kentucky's tuberculosis death rate is so high — third in the nation — citizens should be especially generous in purchasing Christmas seals," Dr. Cash points out. He urged that the Santa on the 1951 Christmas seals accompany every piece of Christmas mail going from homes over the Commonwealth, "to let others know that you are helping to do something about Kentucky's number one communicable disease problem."

According to Dr. E. R. Gernert, president of the Kentucky Tuberculosis Association and Clinician for the Kentucky State Department of Health, seals have been mailed to approximately 350,000 homes over the state. From their sale, the Association needs to raise $250,000 for medical research, case-finding and tuberculosis education.

Ninety-four cents out of every dollar raised by the seal sale remains in Kentucky for use in carrying out local and state tuberculosis programs. Mrs. Billie T. Gresham is chairman of the sale in Caldwell county.

FOUR ANGELS... and their Shepherds

They certainly don't behave like angels most of the time!
But when you hear them singing the beloved carols, you can't help thinking that it couldn't have been sweeter music the night the angels sang in Bethlehem.
And if one of them is your child, you sort of feel like one of the shepherds "keeping watch over their flocks by night."
And the next thing you know—you're wishing you could go to the Manger and "see this thing which has come to pass, which the Lord has made known unto us."
Then, Sunday morning, you take the whole family to Church. And in a quiet moment of meditation or prayer you realize suddenly that all the years and all the miles haven't separated the angels and shepherds of Today from the Child of Bethlehem.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Teaching Children Good Citizenship

(By David Taylor Marke)

"What's a citizen, Daddy?" your child asks one day, and you have to stop and think because it is so many things.

"Because you were born in the United States, you are an American citizen," is no answer—not for a child of today. He wants to know WHY he should be proud of the fact. Once pride in his country is instilled in him, the willingness to become a GOOD citizen follows naturally.

This was the conclusion of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Beckwith of Little Falls, N. J., winners of a prize-winning essay just published by the New Jersey Educational Review.

"Certain inalienable rights have been granted and preserved for us throughout the glorious history of our nation," say the Beckwiths, "and if they are to be further preserved for our posterity, we must awaken to the dangers that threaten them. Large segments of our population have been lulled into a lethargy regarding active citizenship; they expect all sorts of guarantees and handouts by their government."

"The younger generations have grown up in just such a national environment; they are prone to follow the 'something-for-nothing' trail and are thus easy marks for slick operators who seek to replace Americanism with Communism, Socialism, Fascism or other 'isms' which don't measure up to our American way of life."

"The most important lesson in citizenship has been overlooked. The youth of our nation have learned that as Americans they have certain rights and freedoms; few of them realize, however, that for every one of the privileges there is a corresponding duty. We, then, should take stock of ourselves and show by precept and example that we recognize the duties, obligations and responsibilities which we owe in return for our 'Bill of Rights'."

The Beckwiths point out a higher regard for the processes of government can be instilled in our youth if we as citizens vote as intelligently as possible and respect and support public officers in the honest performance of their duties.

We enjoy the freedoms of religion, speech and press, but do we respect the other fellow's right to the same privileges? they ask. "Within the family circle a child can soon learn to be tolerant of the religious beliefs of his neighbors. It can be pointed out that while others may worship the same God in different ways, we have chosen the way that satisfies us best."

"The radio and the newspaper bring into every home a most understandable demonstration of the freedoms of speech and press. Discussion in the home of the pros and cons of controversial issues will instill in the child the responsibilities of thinking before expressing his views and also to give consideration to the views and opinions of others. The child carries with it the duty of offering constructive criticism."

One of the rights easily understood by a child is the right to own personal property. When we teach him to respect the rights and property of others, he is learning one of the most important duties of citizenship, they say.

It's the most natural thing in the world for children to imitate their parents, say the Beckwiths. Parents should realize and faithfully practice the duties of citizenship if they expect their children to follow those tendencies.

"EXPANDABLE HOUSES"

The University of Kentucky's Experiment Station has developed plans for an "expandable house" for farm families. Arrangements allow rooms to be added as the family increases in size. Two plans have been made for basic units of 34 by 30 feet and 32 by 28 feet, before additions are made. Drawings show floor plans and the outside appearance of the completed houses. Interested farm families should see their county agent.

Story Of Pop As Whiz At Housework

(By Cynthia Lowry)

The women's magazines, it seems, have a fascination for humorously critical stories written by men describing how, when the wife was in the hospital for a couple of weeks, they were able to turn housekeeper and cook for the family in 15 minutes or so a day.

Most of these guys, who pick up from $75 to $1,500 for these pieces, are engineers. They always explain carefully that they had long thought that the little woman had been operating the home in a highly inefficient manner. And that if the average business were run on such a catch-as-catch-can basis, the firm would be in bankruptcy at the end of a few months.

They also keep charts and time graphs on their flyers into housekeeping. They explain in detail how they were able to cut 10 minutes from the time it takes to make a bed by taping the corners down and sheared another two hours from the work week by doing the weekly shopping at the very time the laundry was in the washing machine.

Dusting and carpet-sweeping is really nothing, they explain, and can be done with the right hand while the left hand—which is completely useless during this period—is plumping sofa pillows. They always boast about their time-saving in cooking. Get a 7-pound roast—and it's usually pot roast, which they seem to think is an economy cut but now is almost the price of a standing roast—and cook it on Sunday. Then for the next week, heat up slices of meat in gravy. Have baked potatoes, because you can clean up the kitchen and scrub the bathroom floor while they are baking. Skip vegetables and salad—who likes them? If you plan to wash dishes only once a week—or better still use paper plates—you can save endless time.

At the end of these condescending articles, the individual woman reader has a tendency to be fighting mad, because the inference is, obviously, that she's an idiot who hasn't the wit to figure out how to run through these simple chores fast. Or that she must be deceiving her lord and master into thinking she's slaving away over a hot stove or pushing a mop when actually she's loitering around listening to soap operas or entertaining her chums at canasta every afternoon (canasta seems to have taken the place of bridge among the expositors of the housewife).

A student of these articles is entitled to a little righteous anger. For instance, even if the author is the father of six or seven children, they always seem to be in age brackets where it's okay for daddy to hustle off to the office and leave them to their own devices. They never have to hire an "accommodator." When Mother is home, she usually hustles the kids a hot lunch. When Daddy is gathering material for the piece which is going to pay Mother's hospital bill, they take peanut butter sandwiches and like it.

Daddy skips the necessity for laundering and ironing the orderly curtains. He doesn't clean the cellar. He drops his own suit off at the cleaner's on the way to the train—and doesn't leave it for Mother to do. He also picks up his own clothes as he goes along—and hanging them up in the closet eliminates the constant necessity for pressing which is one of his wife's time-consuming chores. He doesn't, apparently, think it necessary to iron the children's clothes. A thorough housecleaning, including taking the rugs outside, is something that is postponed until after the emergency is over.

Most of all, he's proving a point, coping with an unusual situation and he's all fired up with enthusiasm for showing off. If he had to do the same job day in, day out—and this includes emptying his own ash trays—one wonders if he would bring the same speed, zest and superior attitude to his job.
Personally, I'm patiently waiting for the appearance, in a man's magazine, of a piece written by a wife telling how she was able to go into his office and effect some pretty sensational economies of time and personnel. It would probably be used as grounds for divorce.

Play Tools Should Be A Challenge To Kiddies

The right kind of play equipment not only amuses a child, but challenges him, according to Miss Florence Imlay of the UK College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Is it safe and durable; will it hold the child's interest; will it stimulate thought and action; is it adapted to the age and ability of the child? These are some of the questions to be answered before buying toys.

"Play Equipment for Boys and Girls," is a new 12-page circular which may be had free from offices of county or home agents, or from the college, Lexington, Ky.

SOME PLAIN TALK

Omaha — (AP) — The "Air Impulse," weekly newspaper published at Offutt Air Force Base here, appealed for blood donations in language fighting men understand. At the bottom of the newspaper page was the single line:

"It is better to give than receive—blood."

Falcon Island in the South Pacific disappears at intervals of years without regard for geographers. The scientific explanation is that Falcon Island is produced by intermittent eruptions of an underwater volcano.

Alone Steaks At In The Deep Conservation

(By Jim Thomas)
Bodega Bay, Calif. — A scientific study of the "least known" in the world has been because of arguments about a snail.

It's a cooperative study, initiated by the California Fish and Game Department and involving scientists from several universities, government agencies and a number of private citizens who just pitched in to help. Officially the study is the "Abalone Tagging Program" of the Bureau of Marine Fisheries of the Fish and Game Department. Actually it involves the whole gamut of science concerned with the underwater life along the coastline.

The program had its inception early in 1951, when the California Legislature got tired of listening to continual, bitter and largely pointless arguments on whether or not the northern California coast should be opened to commercial abalone diving. For the abalone—one of the sea's great epicurean treats—is the snail in question. And the northern California coast—from Bodega Bay to Crescent City—is the unknown land.

Scientifically described as a marine gastropod or mollusk, the abalone is simply a big saltwater snail. But, cut from his halfshell, sliced and fried in batter, the abalone is one of the most delicious of all sea foods. Hundreds of thousands of persons dive into the icy Pacific waters along the California coast when the tide is low to obtain a few of the prized abalone steaks. South of the Golden Gate, entrance to San Francisco Bay, commercial divers can take abalones for the markets, but the area north of the Gate has been closed to commercial diving. It was the efforts of the market divers to invade the north that brought about the directive for the Abalone Tagging Program.

The directive required the Fish and Game Department to determine whether the abalone population north of the Golden Gate was sufficient to survive commercial diving.

Fulfilling the request was something else. Abalones live in water up to 100 feet or more deep and the only way to take their census is down where they live.

So Richard Croker, chief of the Bureau of Marine Fisheries, converted the 36-foot patrol boat, Broadbill into a research vessel and set out to find out about abalones in their home territory. Capt. Thomas Reveia is skipper.

To fulfill the legislative directive, the tagging program must provide an accurate survey of abalone population, both in the shallow waters reached by sports divers and in the deeper areas reached by commercial divers with deep sea equipment. And it must establish a behavior pattern for the slow moving snails.

Those opposed to commercial diving argue that offshore abalones move into the shallows each year to repopulate the areas thinned out by the sports divers. But no one really knows whether the abalones move in or out, or whether they move at all.

Capt. Reveia and his crew dive for abalones as often as the weather permits underwater work. But instead of sending the delicacies recovered to the market, a bright plastic disc is attached to each shell and the abalone is carefully put back in the same place from which he was taken.

The operations of each dive are carefully recorded as to location, depth, water temperatures, construction and kind of bottom strata, plant growth, and size of abalone tagged. Subsequent dives, carefully checked against the records, show what the abalone are doing.

Col. Lee O. Miles, Reveia's biologist, switched his gathering from the shoreline to the 50 and

Watchtower Tenant Ready For A-Bombs

(By Hanna Neuerbourg)

Frankfurt, Germany — Johann Geiger, 72, lives in a home that has survived a dozen wars—and he thinks it has a chance even to withstand an atomic attack.

With his wife, former locksmith Geiger occupies the Eschenheimer Turm, a watchtower more than 500 years old, which stands in the midst of a busy Frankfurt Circle.

He moved into the tower in 1942, when its former resident, a friend of his, resettled in the countryside.

"It proved a lucky idea," said Geiger. About a year later, Allied planes first raided the city and by the end of the war more than 100 heavy bombs had fallen in a radius of 200 yards from the tower. Some bombs missed by only three yards but they did not shake the stone walls which are 10 feet thick. The basement served as an air raid shelter for the Geigers and 100 neighbors.

The living quarters start at 30 feet above ground and have a picturesque, flower-decorated balcony. There are three rooms, all built in different styles in the course of history, and each is on a different landing.

Until a century ago, tower residents had to toll a bell hourly to prove to citizens that they were staying awake and keeping watch against foes and robbers. The Eschenheimer Turm originally was part of the city wall which girded medieval Frankfurt.

"In return for their guard duty, the residents did not have to pay rent," said Geiger. "I am no guard and therefore the city charges me 40 marks ($9.52) a month."

100 foot depths. Capt. Tom sends up anything unusual he sees on the bottom, from rocks to new forms of algae and star-fish. The specimens are preserved and sent to scientists by Col. Miles. Already several types of algae, or kelp, hitherto unknown on the north California coast have been identified, and one type of coral-line, apparently never named before, has been found.

One of the scientists helping classify the specimens Reveia finds is Dr. Irene McCulloch, marine biologist of the University of Southern California. Several of Dr. McCulloch's associates also help with the work, as well as scientists from the University of California, the Scripps Institute of Oceanography, the Pacific Marine Station of the College of Pacific, The California Academy of Sciences, the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Bureau of Mines.

When the Spaniards reached Yucatan peninsula in 1517, they found that turkeys had been domesticated there by the Indians.

Women in remote sections of Southwestern North America still grind corn on flat rock slabs called metates.

Seal Sale Drive Reaches $247 Mark

Quota For Caldwell Is $1,000; Money Received To Date Exceeds 1950

The Christmas Seal Sale Drive which began in Caldwell county November 17, has reached the $247 mark of the $1,000 quota, reports Mrs. Billie T. Gresham, campaign chairman.

In 1950 by December 1, Mrs. Gresham states, only $175 in seals had been purchased.

In a statement issued for publication William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor said, "It is an established fact that tuberculosis can be cured if taken in the early stages; that it is not hereditary; that it is a chronic, communicable disease; and that it kills more people than all other infectious diseases combined. It is at the same time heartening to realize that progress in the campaign against the disease has resulted in a drop in the death rate from tuberculosis of 85 per cent since the beginning of the regular drive to stamp out this plague. This has meant a saving of 5 million lives during the past 50 years, based on the mortality rate at the time the drive began."

Penney Employees Will Receive Year-End Bonus

A special year-end payment of an amount equal to two weeks' pay for full-time associates of the local J. C. Penney store has been authorized by the company's board of directors, D. M. Plymale, manager here, announces.

The payment, he explained, will be made to those employed for the full year of 1951 with proportionate amounts for extra and part-time associates and those employed less than a year.

All Penney associates except management staff members, whose earnings are determined largely by the company's profit-sharing plan, will share in the payment. It will be made on December 15 at each associate's December 15 pay rate.

The Young Men's Christian Association was founded in London in 1844 by George Williams.

Roy Edward Lowery

Funeral services for Roy Edward Lowery, 40, resident of Caldwell county, are to be held at 1:30 p. m. today at White Sulphur Church, by Rev. Lewis. Burial is to be in Meeks' Cemetery. Funeral arrangements are under the direction of Morgans Funeral Home.
